Due to increased outbreaks of avian flu across Europe, free range hens are increasingly placed inside barns in order to curb further spread. As a result, we are unable to source free-range eggs at the scale we require. From today we'll be transitioning to the use of cage-free eggs to ensure our products remain accessible and of the high standard our consumers expect.

We take our responsibility as a trusted food company seriously and are committed to sourcing quality ingredients for the food you love.